on a Rait Eleven Days Without Food or Water-A Tale of Terrible Privation. The New Orleans Times of the 3d reports the arrival there of the bark Alice Campbell, from Boston, with the shipwrecked crew of the schooner arrival there of the bark Alice Campbell, from Boston, with the shipwrecked crew of the schooner Thomas P. Barkalow, wrecked February 8. The marrative of their sufferings is thus given:

The schooner Thomas P. Barkalow, of Key West, Fla., Captain John B. King, with a crew of five men, consisting of L. G. Thompson, mate; Ft. M. Archer, William H. Spatchers, John Sands and William R. Wilkins, sailors, left Cedar Keys on the morning of Thursday, February 5, for Key West, with a load of lumber. The vessel was, to all appearances, in good condition; and aside from the Bdverse winds encountered matters went on smoothly, feaching Anciote Key on the evening of Friday, the cfd, where they came to anchor and remained all night. On the following morning the 7th of February, the schooner was got under way at an early hour, the wind at the time blowing strong from the southwest, and after running a dew hours it was discovered that the vessel was making water freely, though the locality of the leak could not be ascertained. The pumps were immediately brought into requisition, and it required constant work to keep the water down. Shortly after the vessel began leaking the wind weered to the northward, causing the sea to run high, and culminating in a mishap, to which may be attributed all the suffering subsequently borne by the unfortunate crew. The accident referred to was the joss of the yaw, which was washed from the daylts and carried beyond reach. Even had there been a possibility of recovering the boat, it would have been utterly useless, for the sternpost was jerked out of the violehoe with which the craft was to-seed about. At this time there was no thought that the lost boat would be milmately needed, nor did such an idea occur until the foliowing day, the sth, when, about seven o'clock in the morning, it was discovered that the water was gaining rapidly on the pumps, and all efforts to keep it down were useless. The pumps had been constantly worked during the twelve preceding hours, and all hapads were theoroughly e tant. The prospect of being water-logged did not give the crew any great uneasiness, for they implied that a distance of forty miles could be easily accomplished in that condition, and accordingly all the stores and effects were placed on deck, and a platform arranged to keep them dry. About noon the schooner filled, and as the water covered a platform arranged to keep them dry. About moon the schooner filled, and as the water covered the deck she gradually and everything that had been placed on deck was swept away. The crew ascended to the dry side of the vessel, which remained in that position for about an hour, during which time, the rigging having been cut away, the mainmast worked out and sue gradually righted.

There were on board the schooner half a dozen or more pigs, and when she went over the swine monted off, all out one striking out boldly for where they imagined the land lay. The one that remained swum around the wreck, and was eventually rescued by the mate, and proved to be a most important capture; for upon it and about two pounds of salt pork the uniortunate crew subsasted during the subsequent two weeks. From Sunday, the sth, to the following Thursday, the 12th, the men remained on the schooner, partially submerged, and suffering greatly from cold and thirst.

Hunger did not assail them, for that they relieved by small morsels from their limited supply of pork. A few potatoes, about two dozen, were secured from the forecastle by the men, who dived for them, and with these their thirst was partially assuaged.

After being two days on the vessel it was seen sesuaged.

After being two days on the vessel it was seen that she would eventually go to pieces, and the construction of a rait was commenced out of the spars and deck planks which were working loose. On the morning of the 12th some additions were made to the rait and during the evening they showed to the rait and during the evening they and took the chances of a rescue on a frail structure composed of light planks and a few spars. On this the six men remained for eleven days, several times seeing sails in the distance, which held forth to them the bope of a rescue, only, however, to be disappointed, as the sails as many times faded out of sight, leaving the poor fellows despondent. On the afternoon of the 23d a sail was observed, and shortly the vessel appeared to be bearing down upon the rait. An hour of suspense ensued, and the wrecked crew were cheered by the fact that the vessel held steadily on her course, bearing down upon them—for were this opportunity of a rescue to pass they felt conscious that none could survive for another twenty-four hours. The campbell reached the raft about seven o'clock in the evening, and after considerable time and trouble the wrecked crew were transferred from the rait to the bark, and they were saved.

They presented a pileous sight, their limbs being swollen to twice the natural size, and all were covered with sores and bisters, and not one of the six was able to stand up when placed on the deck of Captain Gorham's vessel. For many days after their rescue they required the utmost care, which was given them by Captain Gorham and his officers; and now, though not recovered, the uniortunates are doing well, but will require weeks before they required the tumost care, which was given them by Captain Gorham and his officers; and now, though not recovered, the uniortunates are doing well, but will require weeks before they required the two of Norfolk, Va., where his lamily at present are, and Mr. Thompson, the taste, resides at Key West, where he has a lamily. "Anything more marvellous and clever than his imporsonations cannot be conceived. A most enjoyable twenty minutes may be spent at his entertainment, which has is it not the least suspicion of indecency, nor anything more more conceived gentleman or lady might witness and appreciate. The His songs in the email voice are only to be deadled by his astonishing powers of personations of anything the most tender conscienced gentleman or lady might witness and appreciate. The His songs in the email voice are only to be deadled by his astonishing powers of personations and form eminently feminine, the manner assentiation and form commentify feminine, the manner assentiated is so true to line—from the turning of a fand own to the peculiar sweep of a sain train—that were it not for the pre-knowledge a spectator would be led to imagine that he was witnessins the acting of a lady, and a very pretty and captivating one, too.
